Dear Mr. Kolby,

Or perhaps in these days of breezy informality, I should call you Bill. The reason therefor is two-fold:

1) I was at Columbia Law School at the same time as you were in the 1940-41 school year. I was in my third year (I graduated in '41) while you were in your first year there.

2) Were it not for your father I would not bear the above name. It was your father who, when he was an ROTC professor at the University of Vermont, influenced more than any other my husband to apply to and then attend Columbia Law School. My husband graduated from U.V.M. in 1937.

And we still spend our vacations at Long Point in North Ferrisburg.

But to get to the gist of my letter. While I may have graduated from Law School (and I did practice for a while thereafter) and while I am a member of the N.Y. and Virginia Bars I no longer practice law.

In fact, I've been married for more than twenty years. Instead, I raised three children.

Instead of going back into practice I went into club work and I am now the president of the Williamsburg Women's Club of Arlington, a GFWC club of some 135 members. These women are real gals - the gals - a far cry from the Helen Hobson caricature. While their approach is conservative, they are very hard-working, well-educated volunteers - not quite in the image of Women's Lib. We would be greatly honored if you would be able to speak to us at one of our meetings - Sept. 26; Oct. 24; November 21; January 23; or April 24.

We don't want any Watergate discussion or a discussion of foreign policy. We would like to know exactly where the CIA fits in the governmental scheme of things, its functions, its organization, and just a general dissertation on how it differs from the State Dept Intelligence,

the DIA and the intelligence branches
of the various armed services.

Too many people seem to associate the CIA with James Bond and we would like to, as it were, disassociate
it from such essentially romantic ideas.

Thank you so much. And should you wonder where I got your home
address - well, the law school
published an Alumni Register in 1973

Sincerely

Maureen H. Gilmore
